Silent Auction at SCBW Event This Friday!

By Marty Cressler
The Sheridan County Benefit Walk Event is THIS FRIDAY, JUNE 8! We will begin serving the delicious pulled pork supper at 6:00 pm.
As you walk into the 4-H Building you will see a large array of raffle prizes, door prizes, and something new this year! We are having a Silent Auction with several of the items that have been donated by area individuals and businesses. If you've never been to a Silent Auction, you'll catch on quickly. Look the items over and decide which ones you would like to own at the end of the evening. There will be a sheet of paper in front of each item with a place for your name and how much you would like to bid. Keep checking back throughout the evening because someone may outbid you. Then it's your turn to outbid them! It's really a lot of fun, and we are sure you're going to like the assortment of Silent Auction items.

If you are on Facebook, go to the Sheridan County Benefit Walk page and you can see some of the items that will be up for bids. You can even leave a bid on our Facebook page prior to Friday evening. If you leave a bid on FB, that is where the bidding will begin on Friday at the 4-H building. For example, if you love that metal Last Supper sculpture that Alvin Wildeman donated, leave a bid on FB, then come to the Benefit Walk Event on Friday evening to make sure no one outbids you! Whoever has the high bid at the end of the evening will take that item home.
Come on out to the 4-H building for the Free Will Donation supper and check out all that you can participate in:

Sign up for the door prizes
Buy some sugar cookies that were made by the DSNWK clients
Buy some raffle tickets for over $8000 in prizes

All of these will be available to the kids coming to the Library's activity. It will be great to have enough books for everyone.

Preacher's Point

Pep Rally

Remember pep rallies from high school? In my junior year, our basketball team made it to the final four. We had a pep rally when sectionals started, when regionals began, and when we sent our heroes off to the state tourney (if you are wondering we took it on the chin in the semi-final).

The events of the rallies were all the same. The cheerleaders would lead us in some cheers, the band would play the school fight song, and coach would give an inspirational speech of some sort. All of this, the cheers, the music, and coach's speech would cause most everyone to leave the gym more hyped than when they entered. The school spirit usually remained at a peak through that night's game. If the team won, the excitement would increase a bit before it waned away, but when the team lost, enthusiasm crashed.

With all that said, let me swing over to a conversation I had with a couple of friends a few weeks ago. I will call them Bob and Sue. Both claim to be Christians and, for the record, neither Bob nor Sue attend my church, but I have known both for many years. Bob is one of those guys that if he did not show up in church people would wonder if he was in the hospital; he is always there. Sue, on the other hand, was a regular church attendee but has not gone in about a year. The conversation started with Bob talking about how good church was Sunday.

Bob: "Church was good this week. I really got a lot out of it!"

Me: "Praise the Lord. What happened?"

Bob: "Actually nothing out of the ordinary. The praise and worship team sang, the band seemed more upbeat this week, and Pastor's sermon left me feeling inspired!"

Me: "How so? What did he preach about?"

Please take note here; this conversation is taking place on Monday afternoon. We are only one day removed from the church service Bob is describing.

Bob: "I think he was in the Ephesians. I don't remember what it was about exactly, but I do know I felt so much better when I left."

At this point is was when memories of my high school pep rally started popping into my brain. The singers took the place of the cheerleaders, the trombones and tubas of the marching band replaced by guitars and keyboards, and the Pastor took coaches position in delivering an enthusiastic speech.

Sue spoke up, "That's exactly why I don't go the church anymore. My life was falling apart. My husband left me, my brother died, and mom was diagnosed with cancer all within a month, and all I got out of church was a bunch of singing and the preacher telling me God loves me. I can listen to music on the radio in my car; and if God loves me so much, why didn't he give that preacher something to say that could help me? Knowing God loves me is one thing, but when you love someone you should help them, and I did not get that at church. I did not want to walk out feeling good about things; I wanted my life to change."

All of this, my high school pep rallies, Bob, Sue; bring me to a question - what does God want people to get out of church? From the conversation above it appears Bob was satisfied with leaving feeling better than he walked in, while Sue was looking for something much substantial. People expect different things; but what does God expect? Ephesians 4:11-12 tells us God supplies Christian leaders, "For the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ."

Perfecting and edifying imply growth. If we apply the old saying "practice makes perfect" to that verse, we could conclude that the church and especially its ministers, should help people practice Christianity.

Edify, means to build up, which is entirely different from making one feel better. To edify, we must teach and train. Teaching is learning, and training is when you take what someone has learned and help them put it into practical use. For example, someone may be taught the fundamentals of carpentry, how to measure, how to saw a board, how to hammer a nail. Training is now taking what they have learned, the fundamental skills, and showing them how to use those skills to build a chair. A church should teach the fundamentals of the Christian life, then train people on how to put it to practical use.

There is more, much more, but I only have space to look at one. God does want to change lives. He tells Timothy he wants his minister to "strive not about words to no profit, but to the subverting of the hearers" (2 Timothy 2:14). Subverting is to overthrow. God wants to be the King of your life. God desires that you give up control of your life and give Him the reigns; as Romans 12: puts it, "a living sacrifice." Words that will overthrow the heart and cause real change in a person's life will almost always include some stomping of toes (2 Samuel 12:1-13).

Did you stay home this Sunday; did you go to church, or did you attend a pep rally?

PASTOR'S WORDS

Love & Lust Pt 11

By Micah Howery

We have been going through 1Corinthians chapter 13 verses 4-7 and looking at Paul's detailed description of Agape, the selfless, godly kind of love. So far, we've learned that Agape is patient, kind, not envious, doesn't brag, is not proud or rude. It also does not seek its own benefit, is not easily angered, doesn't keep a record of wrongs and won't rejoice in evil but rejoice in the truth.

Our final phrase is a collection of phrases used in a literary device of repetition. Paul says that love protects, trusts, hopes and perseveres all things. Let's look at each of these individually first.

The first word, "protects" has, as its root, the word for roof or covering. But the actual word means to hide. The idea here is that Agape covers over the sins of our past. It goes along with the phrase "keeps no record of wrongs". Some things do need to be brought to light (delight in the truth) but some things do not. Some things should just be forgiven and forgotten.

The second word, "trusts" is the word "Pisteuo" which is the word for "believe, faith or faithful". Now, Paul isn't saying we should believe everything, nor should we trust everything. Probably a better way to translate it to English would be "always believes" or "is always faithful". Love never stops believing in the object of the love.

The third is "hope". In English, hope can mean wishful thinking. The Greek word is far more confident. It is very similar to "Pisteuo". However, while Pisteuo is more of a "leaning on" kind of trust, hope is the confident and expectant desire. Basically, Agape never gives up.

The final word is "persevere". This is a great compound word that literally means "to remain under". The image this word conjures is one of a heavy load that the person simply keeps holding up. Agape doesn't quit when things get heavy. When people let you down, Agape says, "he's not heavy, he's my brother".

As you can see, Agape-love is very self-sacrificing. It's no wonder the KJV writers translated it into "charity", instead of love. When we live a life that is about other people, we are actually set free from the tyranny of self. We train our minds and bodies to wait, to serve others and to obey our will. That means you will have greater control over your impulses, drives and temptations. Anyone who has struggled with these can attest how powerful they are.

I probably should mention that this list is not exhaustive. Paul is writing to a church in history with some very specific problems. The total context of these few verses was about how the church at Corinth was behaving selfishly even in their church services and the use of the gifts of the Spirit. It makes sense, then, that Paul's descriptors were all selfless attributes.

And, I should remind everyone that "love" is a messy word. We are not just talking about romantic relationships. The attributes of Agape are for everyone. I am commanded to Agape-love my enemies, not just my wife. True, I need to have these attributes when dealing with my wife and family, but also with my church members, my coworkers, my civic officials, my neighbors and those who live afar off.

Finally, I want to explain why. Why is it so important that we take on these qualities as followers of Jesus? The best answer is: because God is like this. As God's adopted children, I'm instructed to "behave in a manner worthy" of that title. But that's not all the story.

God wants me to be loving because it's good for me and it's good for others. Agape-love directs the flow of my life toward blessings, true joy, pure and fulfilling relationships, freedom from bondage to sin, temptation and offense and a character of true peace.

Being a person of Agape-love is difficult. It will take a lot of work and it will cost you a great deal. Just remember that it is worth it.

Delicacies for Occasions

So many delicious dishes may be prepared with gelatin as a foundation, making salads and desserts of various kinds.

With lemon jelly as a foundation, chopped vegetables such as green pepper, cabbage, onion and celery, stirred into the jelly and allowed to harden, may then be cut in squares, served on lettuce with a highly seasoned dressing. Lemon jelly may also serve as a dessert with chopped pineapple, cherries or strawberries and a few pecans, molded and served with sweetened whipped cream. Lay halves on canned peaches on lettuce leaves and place a ball of nicely seasoned cottage cheese on each; pour over a salad dressing in which a fourth of a cupful of cottage cheese has been carefully mixed. Canned pears may be served in the same way.

Baked Corn with Cheese

- Take two cupfuls of corn, mix with two well-beaten eggs, a cupful of milk, two tablespoonfuls of Worcestershire sauce; add a cupful of bread crumbs, reserving a few for the top, which are spread over the dish after mixing well with two teaspoonfuls of melted fat.

The simplest of all desserts and those of which the majority are most fond, are the frozen dishes. Various fruit juices or combinations of them with the pulp of fruit, adding rich milk or thin cream, even buttermilk, makes delicious frozen desserts. The juice of two oranges, two lemons with two cupfuls of honey and a pint of thin cream frozen, is one worth trying. A little of the finely grated rind may be added, if liked, to vary the flavor.

Another combinations well liked is the juice of one lemon, two oranges, three bananas, put through a potato ricer, sugar to sweeten, add a pint of cream, rather thin. Freeze as usual.

Jesse Warner was looking on our legal dispensatory last Tuesday. Jesse says it is the best in the state and according to Barnes would be a country school in comparison with the last meeting of the legislature.

Mr. McKinney, Spring Brook township fell from the roof of a grainery last Tuesday afternoon and broke his left thigh near the hip joint. The fall was about ten feet and owing to Mr. McKinney's age fears are entertained that it will be a long time in knitting and getting well. Dr. Hall is attending him.

J. H. Huff and his son Claire started today for Oklahoma, they traded W. S. Quisenberry out of his pony team and phaeton and went out in good style. We hope that J. H. may have the best of luck and make a fortune in the south. Hank deserves a full supply of the good things and wherever he goes will be a benefit to any place where he may locate we recommend him as a good business man and worthy of confidence.

The Sunday school at the Moody school house is a grand success, a good attendance every Sunday may the good work go on.

Sand Creek Items

Our Sunday school has developed into a first class Sunday school and no mistake. We mean no exaggeration when we say that on last Sunday the house was filled to its utmost capacity and the programme and exercises were highly interesting. The singing too, was excellent, the rendition of song after song being superlatively grand. Too much could scarcely be said in behalf of such a lovely school; and while your humble scribe is not personally identified with the enterprise, yet we say without hesitancy. It is an honor and blessing to be connected with such a school. We have in the person of Mr. McGlasson a

Lifespan Wellness

What you do today will affect your future. Nowhere is this as true as it is in issues regarding aging. The way in which you take care of yourself through the years, both physically and mentally, will affect the natural process of aging.

No one knows this better than centenarians, people who are 100 years old and older. Centenarian studies demonstrate that life does not diminish with aging. In fact, 100-year-olds show how the acceptance of aging can be positive, joyful, and exciting. They demonstrate that aging brings new experiences, knowledge, wisdom, and a greater ability to engineer a positive approach to the aging process. Many centenarians contribute their longevity to the following:

Positive Attitude

A positive attitude affects overall happiness, health, and well-being. A positive attitude can also help you better manage life's transitions and challenges.

Eating Smart and Healthy

Eating right can help prevent illness and chronic disease. It can also provide you with more energy so you can be alert and a better decision-maker. Eating healthy includes a well-balanced diet and a healthy relationship with food.

Physical Activity

Regular exercise is associated with decreased death and disability from diseases such as heart disease, diabetes, arthritis, and cancer. It is also associated with positive psychological benefits, such as improved quality of life. The most important thing to remember about exercise is to do it. Make exercise a habit.

Brain Activity

A healthy brain is crucial to survival, growth, and everyday successes. Similar to the rest of the body, the brain needs exercise and maintenance to optimize and protect its current and future health. In particular, the brain needs socialization, mental stimulation, physical activity, nutrition, and sleep.

Social Activity

Engaged people are often healthier, happier, less depressed, and demonstrate enhanced brain vitality. Social activity also improves academic performance, inspires a positive attitude, enhances self-esteem, connects you to family and peers, and reduces the risk of illnesses and disease.

Tuning-in to the Times

Staying in tune to the times throughout life promotes lifelong learning, which increases knowledge, problem-solving skills, and decision-making. Staying on top of the latest technology and keeping up with the news also enhances brain stimulation and helps broaden social opportunities and networks.

Safety

Practicing safety is important because it helps keep you out of harm's way. From locking doors to learning how to swim,

News from the Outside

By John Liester

Once again, another week has gone by. Got to do a bit of fishing and caught a few too! Had a raccoon try to steal our fish. We found out they just don't like pepper spray. It was hilarious!

The catfish spawn is close. Catching more and more from rocky areas. This is a good time to hook big fish. I hope people turn back the females that are full of eggs.

Webster is full now. The breakwaters are under water now. I'd bet it will be a while before you can drive along the south side. There were lots of people fishing there!

Crappie are finishing up the spawn and white bass are getting started. Time to go fill the cooler!

Not much else to report this week. Take care folks and as always, enjoy the outside.

It is important to be safe in the various realms of life including home, transportation, health, recreation, and emergency preparedness and social media.

Know Your Health Numbers

Certain health numbers can save and extend your life. These numbers are associated with cholesterol, triglycerides, blood pressure, blood sugar, body mass index (BMI), and waist circumference. A lifestyle including regular visits to a health-care provider, proper nutrition, and physical activity promote these numbers and contribute to healthy aging throughout the lifespan.

Stress Management

Appropriate stress is healthy and useful, but when stress overwhelms you, it can become distress, causing anxiety, tension, irritability, and a number of health problems. Learning what causes stress and how to manage it in positive ways helps you cope and live a more balanced, healthy life.

Financial Affairs

Good financial management is important whether you earn minimum wage or are a millionaire. The first step to healthy financial management is balancing income with expenses. With a money management and spending plan in place, you are more likely to meet your financial goals.

Sleep

Sleep has a major impact on overall health and quality of life, including the way you look, feel, and perform on a daily basis. Your bodies need sleep to repair muscles, consolidate memories, and regulate hormones and appetite. When you sleep well, you wake up feeling refreshed and alert for daily activities. Sleep prepares you to concentrate, make decisions, and fully engage in school, work, and social activities.

Taking Time for You

In today's busy world, you juggle multiple priorities and responsibilities and likely make time for others before making time for yourself. But you are important too. Taking time for you is to take care of you, which makes you a better family member, friend, co-worker, caregiver, or leader. Even if it is just for 10 minutes a day, a time out is good for your mind, body, and soul.
